- Teachers may not solicit or provide private tutoring of students in their current classes or students for whom they have any current responsibility. For example, if a staff person is a member of child study team, he/she will not privately tutor a student who is serviced by the team likewise, if a staff person is the student's classroom teacher, he/she will not privately tutor a student who is in his/her class.
- If any concerns arise regarding conflict of interest, the principal or appropriate supervisory personnel will determine whether the private tutoring arrangement can occur.
